

Create a lesson plan for a college non-fiction writing class. Include an introduction, lesson outline, questioning, assessment, differentiation and plenary. Include links to some video and worksheet resources.

Introduction

In this lesson, students will learn about non-fiction writing. They will identify the elements of non-fiction writing and explore the different types of non-fiction writing. Through activities and discussion, students will explore and develop their understanding of the genre and its various forms.

Lesson outline

- Explain the elements of non-fiction writing
- Discuss the various types of non-fiction writing
- Show examples of each type of non-fiction writing
- Use video and worksheet resources to practice the different types
- Discuss the different styles and approaches of writing
- Practice and discuss sample non-fiction texts

Questioning

- What are the elements of non-fiction writing?
- How are the various types of non-fiction writing different?
- What is the best approach for writing a particular type of non-fiction?

Assessment

- Provide a written assignment for students to write a 500-word essay about a particular type of non-fiction writing
- Create an online discussion board and have the students post their essays for peer review
- Allow students to score each other's essays based on the criteria outlined in the lesson

Differentiation

- Provide additional resources for weaker students
- Allow students to work together in small groups
- Give students extra time to work on their essays

Plenary

- Have students present their essays to the class and provide feedback to their peers
- Encourage students to discuss any issues or questions they may have
- Post a survey asking students to reflect on their experience and the effectiveness of the lesson
